GOV. COX REFUTED BY ALL PRESIDENTS

Each Declares Himself Opposed to Formation of Entangling Alliances With Europe.

Washington—That America should remain free from such entangling alliances with European powers as expressed in the Wilson-British League of Nations covenant is declared over and over again by all presidents of the United States from the time of Washington.

Following is a refutation by each of them of the advocacy by Governor Cox of the League without reservation and an endorsement of the declaration by Senator Harding that he will stand for America first and turn his back upon the covenant:

George Washington, Sept. 9, 1796: "Against the insidious wiles of foreign influence."

John Adams, May 16, 1797: "Although it is very true that we ought not to involve ourselves in the political system of Europe but to keep ourselves always distinct and separate from it."

Thomas Jefferson, Oct. 17, 1803: "Equal and exact justice to all men of whatever state of persuasion, religious or political; peace, commerce and honest friendship with all nations; entangling alliances with none."

James Madison, March 4, 1809: "To cherish peace and friendly intercourse with all nations having correspondent disposition."

James Buchanan, Aug. 30, 1845: "Separated as we are from the old world by a vast ocean and still further removed from it by the nature of our republican institutions, the march of free governments on this continent must not be transmitted by the intrigues and selfish interests of European powers."

Abraham Lincoln, Dec. 1, 1862: "We have forbore from taking part in any controversy between foreign states, but have left to every nation the exclusive conduct and management of its own affairs."

Woodrow Wilson, May 6, 1914: "America should lead her own life. We cannot form alliances with those who are not going our way. We need not and should not form alliances with any nation in the world. Those who are right, those who hold their honor higher than their advantage, do not need alliances."
